I Live By Faith In The Son Of God, Who Loved Me And Gave Himself For Me

Today is the Day That Counts

The really good coaches have the ability to motivate and focus on what matters.

One of several nicknames carried by the late UCLA basketball coach John Wooden was The Wizard of Westwood. During his eventful career, he mentored – not just coached – dozens of men who went on to success both in the NBA and in a variety of careers outside athletics. Along the way, his teams won a record ten national titles and set a record 88-game collegiate winning streak. He died in 2010 but remains one of the most respected figures in all of sports.

Wooden was a reflective man whose speeches, books, and occasional interviews scattered gems of practical wisdom. He was a man who read his Bible daily, and much of what he said mirrored the teachings of Jesus.

In an interview he gave Adam Scheffer, sports writer for The Denver Post, he quoted a line he said he used frequently at practice sessions: "I want you to improve a little each day. Don't expect to improve a lot. Today is the day, the only day you can do anything about." That statement isn't just for athletes.

We are an instant-results, quick-fix society. Quality gets sacrificed along the way. People are seen only as clients and consumers. Relationships that are going to require effort to create or repair are just abandoned. Corners are cut, rules are broken, and disastrous consequences follow. In the aftermath, we either wonder why we feel so empty or blame God for letting us down – or both.

You can't build a championship-caliber team in a day. No single play in the game plan turns losers into champions. No one sales meeting transforms a company's bottom line. No weekend marriage or parenting seminar can set right the impaired relationships of a struggling family. No one sermon or inspirational worship time defines a church to set right its troubles or lift it from the doldrums.

"Today is the only day that matters," Wooden added. "Yesterday will never change. Learn from it, but you'll never change it. And tomorrow is yet to be. What can only be affected is today. That's what I want. Each day."

Don't fool yourself in thinking you can set everything right today, but be wise enough to know you can do a little bit toward your goal. Deepen your faith, strengthen your family, focus your career path, encourage a friend, repair a damaged relationship – today. Just a tiny bit. Without expecting a lot. Then trust God to work over the long haul to bring you an outcome that is right and holy.

Mayo Clinic—Rochester, Minnesota

Doris Newman recently returned from a stay at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota. If you know of anyone who will be going to the Mayo Clinic, you need to pass along this information about the House of Compassion. This house is a work overseen by the Rochester church of Christ. It provides complimentary housing to people from around the world who are in Rochester for medical reasons. Doris highly recommends it. You can obtain further information by calling 507-289-6025.

One Another: What Are We Worth?

The last component of our study: "Valuing One Another".

We have VALUE because:

I. God paid for us (Acts 20:28, Gal 1:3-4, Gal 2:20)

1. Sometimes value is determined by an appraisal.
 - A. When determining OUR value, who is more of an expert than God?
 - B. Romans 8:32

2. What does that say about our value and worth?

- A. Who do you belong to?
- B. What do think that does to your value?

II. God has gifted us. (Rms 12:4-6; 1 Cor 12:14, 17-18, 21; Eph 4:16)

1. Every single believer is gifted.
2. Here's the point: we need each other.

III. God will glorify us. (1 Cor 15:42-44, 53; Phil 3:20-21)

1. Our bodies will be immortal!
