Lists

I operate best from to-do lists. Do you? Making out my list not only helps me remember the things ahead but to prioritize them. Deadlines are most menacing when you've let them get so close that they smother you into inactivity.

The list I usually work from covers more than just to-day. There are some complex and interrelated issues that are going to take several days to unravel – if they can be unraveled. So they are on the list in priority positions.

I try to keep each list reasonably short. As the number of items on my to-do list grows, the ability to manage my time effectively diminishes. Referring back to the list imposes discipline on my day and holds me to my tasks. "Planning is of no use at all," says Peter Drucker, "unless it eventually degenerates into work."

There are two other lists I keep as well. These aren't always written down. Yet I carry them with me everywhere I go. And the strange thing is, as one shrinks as the other grows.

My worry list tends to be composed of things that are beyond my power to control. So crisis events, others' demands on me, and things I'd like to bring under my control make this list. These are the things that distract me during the day and keep me awake at night. They seldom generate anything productive, for the idea that I can bring life under my personal control is only a delusion.

My prayer list is made up of the people, situations, and events I choose to surrender to God. These are the things I know I can't handle. They are too big and too important for me to try and force them to an outcome I can dictate.

See why they cancel out one another? Anything I've given over to God doesn't have to be fretted over. He's competent enough to handle it. So long as I am trying to bring things under my personal control, though, I run the risk of fighting not only the defiant realities around me but God's will for my life. The more praying I do, the less power worry has to interrupt my strength or sleep.

The Bible presents this challenge: "Do not worry about anything, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known to God. And the peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:6-7 NRSV).

The more items that get moved off your worry list onto your prayer list, the better off you'll be. God will graciously replace your anxiety with His peace.

Remembering You in Prayer

Galatians 6:2 "Bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

Last week you were challenged to pray specifically about things as they relate to you and your participation.

1. You were also asked to pray for others.

Our prayers are usually focused on problems / illness. So, I went looking (flip pages) for verses I could use.

1. James 5:16 where we're told to: "...pray for each other so that you may be healed...."

Paul's prayers:

1. Phil 1:3-4; Col 1:3; Eph 1:16; 2 Tim 1:3; Phil 1:4

It's important to pray for hurts/needs, but we also need to be _____ God for each other.

1. Because Jesus promised us (John 16:33) - we will never run out of _____.
2. There may not always be people around who ____.

Philippians 1:3-6

When we're praying for other we need to be praying for what God may yet do through them.

Sermon Assignment: Pray for each of the following:

1. The person _____ you
2. A person on the _____
3. A person you're having trouble _____ this morning
